The German Celebration at Titusville.

THE SPEECHES.

We were unable in Thursday's issue to present a full report of the speeches delivered at the German celebration in Titusville on Wednesday evening, but present this morning the remarks of Hon. Fred. Bates, Henry. C. Bloss, Esq., and Morris Einstein:

SPECEA OF MAYOR BATES.

It is universally conceded that this Nineteenth Century has contributed more to fill up the great volume of history than any of the centuries of the past. True, all of them have their land-marks and epochs.

There is Athens with her Parthenon, her Marathon, her Thermopyla and her Demosthenes. There is Rome with her Coliseum, her Appian way, her Virgil, her Cicero, and Carthage as her spoil. There is Luther with his Great Reformation. There is Galileo with his scientific discourses. There is the old printing press of Faust and Guttenberg. The Magna Charta, the settlement at Jamestown, the landing at Plymouth and the American Revolution. All these are of centuries past; landmarks and themes of great historical records which have come up slowly and at long intervals from each other—so slowly that oftentimes one and two generations of men lived and passed off the stage without even knowing that the Old World did really move.

But not so now. Crowded into the past twenty years and one following quickly upon the heels of the other, we have a Fulton, a Morse and a Field; a Webster and a Bismarck! Our Ulysses and "Our Fritz;" a Pittsburg Landing, a Vicksburg and Appottomax, a Gravelotte, a Beaumont and a Sedan; a Napoleon the I., and, Glory Hallelujah, a Napoleon the last.

But yesterday the tidings flashed from continent to continent that the great emperor of a great empire had declared war against a neighboring power. All the world paused to reflect. Wise men said "that Napoleon knows what he is about, he is cool, crafty, sagacious, deep in intigue and strong in battalions." Looking upon him (as all the world has for the past twenty years,) as the second volume of that great human enigma, of which old Napoleon was the first! Men looked upon the issues and results of the war with doubt mingled with fear. But notwithstanding all this King William says to Napoleon, "I know you are at the head of a great and powerful nation, I know your prestige in war and that of your people, I know you are strong in battalions but you are making war upon me without a pretext, you have no cause of action, and with justice and right on my side I accept the situation and proclaim defiance to you and your cohorts. But yesterday I say all this came to pass. To-day we see this great emperor standing before King William saying "Sire, as I have no army to command, I lay my sword at your feet."

This is the great victory, fellow Germans, which you to-night celebrate. You have a right to celebrate it, for your nation and your kindred won it. You have a right to celebrate it, for it is a triumph of justice over injustice, of truth over falsehood. You have a right to celebrate it, for it has made you a united Germany, and as a united Germany you occupy the commanding position of all the great powers of Europe. Six weeks ago King William accepted the situation—to-day he is master of it.

I recollect, some years ago, of hearing Wendell Phillips make use of the following illustration:—"I have stood in Switzerland beneath a roof whose ridge is the dividing line between the Danube and the Rhine. A drop of water on one side goes to bear up the commerce of Holland and our mother country, one on the other is borne onward to the seraglio of the Turk." So stands King William and United Germany to-day. He has it in his power to sway the sceptre of tyranny and oppression over the nations of Europe, and to roll backward the tide of freedom and civilization or he can extend to all the olive branch of peace, and say to them—now that the "last of the Cæsars" is hurled from the throne "let us have peace and encourage the fruits of peace." Let us cherish the hope that he will do this, that he will be the supporter of freedom of speech, freedom of the press, and freedom of the individual. Nay, more; let us cherish the hope that he will say to France—pre-eminent—as she is in culture, refinement, and in civilization. "You want a Republican form of government. Now cool down your excitable natures, discard your fine spun theories, and exercise a little practical common sense. Call together your talent and form a good constitution, and we as a German nation will cheer and sustain you in your Republican Government, and hold you up with our own strong right hand." Let him say this, and he will not only prove himself as he truly has—"first in war," but "first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

SPEECH OF HENRY C. BLOSS.

Mr. President, and Ladies and Gentlemen: One should be, by good rights, something of a German himself, to enter fully and with complete sympathy into the inspiration of this occasion. It would be fortunate for your speaker, for instance, if he should know by the seeing of the eye, the Rhine, the beautiful Rhine, that coveted and contested river, that natural barrier of nations, if he could have seen, were it only once, its banks covered with grey castles, and hoary ruins, and blushing under the September sun with all the purple glories of the vine. It would be still more fortunate for him if he knew a little something of the social life of the Fatherland, if he had ever breathed the sweet air of the Saxon home, (France has no home as we understand that institution to be;) if he had listened to the music of her gardens, joined in the athletic games, witnessed the play of her busy industries, turned the leaves of her profoundly instructive history, stood at the tomb of the Great Frederick or gazed upon that monument in Berlin which a national pride has raised to your great national poet, the immortal Schiller.

But something we Americans do know of you to esteem. We have not failed to notice how patiently, how modestly, and with what utter absence of vain glory you, our German fellow-citizens, have demeaned yourselves, since the 15th of July, of this summer, that historic date, when your brothers and your fathers, your cousins and friends, [your countrymen all, with faces subdued with patience yet radiant with trust in God, put on the whole armor of battle, and your whole people from the Vosges to the Rhine, embarked upon the treacherous and tempestuous sea of National war. That war has rolled its burning course from the frontier to the gates of the French Capital. It is been like a dream for swiftness. You are conquerors. You have covered yourselves with glory. It is high time for you to rejoice, and we rejoice with you in this proud and happy moment of your victorious nationality. The roar of battle has been heard louder than the waves of the sea, and the torch of German victory has lighted up every battle-field from Forbach to Sedan. You have cast down and trampled the flower of the French army, the lilies of France, in a dozen pitched battles. You have crushed the Empire, and your kind old Patriarch King William holds the Emperor Napoleon a prisoner and a captive; and all this has been done and accomplished with a rapidity, precision, force and completeness that startles and astounds the world.

Cold, cold indeed, would be your bosoms, and dead the fires of patriotism and human passion within you, if you Germans did not feel the swelling sentiments of love, pride, nationality and aspiration, and humble gratitude to Almighty God!

Sad it is, my friends, that in this moment of your exaltation you still shed tears, tears perchance for kindred dear, for doubt not that many a noble form has found a soldier's sepulchre, and many a generous heart has ceased to throb forever.

I say, too, that as American citizens we could have sympathized with you had the Prussian colors gone down with reverse, had the Rhine provinces been wrested from you, had your army been hurled back to your Capital, had King William surrendered his sword with helpless hand. Then we would have mourned with you, as we now rejoice.

There are a great many reasons, for an attitude of friendliness on our part, and our tones of sympathy. And, first, I will mention a selfish one, or at least a local one, peculiar to this people and section. For when Napoleon appealed to the arbitrament of the sword, and despatched his fleet from Cherbourg to the Baltic Sea, for the purposes of blockade, he struck a blow at American as well as European industry, and at the great petroleum interest, whether on land or sea, in ship or car or tank or still, which affected us most nearly and the population between the Alleghanys and Lake Erie. It was like the visitation of flood or fire, or bank defalcation, not merely annihilating capital and depreciating property, but undermining confidence and breathing fear, suspicion and timidity in all financial ventures.

It is a solemn thing to break the peace of the world in the nineteenth century, for so intimate are the relations of all nations, through the sensitive channels of trade and commerce, that war must always work embarrassments and mischief, if it does not inflict a temporary paralysis or stagnation of the organism or operations of human industry.

And this brings us to ask the question, who is responsible for this baleful war? When two parties fall into a quarrel, and become involved in strife, the world inquires who struck the first blow; who offered the provocation? And woe be to the Government that plunges a people in the horrors of war, without the justifications of the highest sanction and authority. No sovereign power can do that without being guilty of a brother's blood before the tribunal of public opinion and at the bar of God.

We live, more than ever before, in an age when public opinion is omnipotent. No individual so humble but he may, with confidence, appeal, if in the right, to that tribunal. No individual is so strong, if in the wrong; no institution so intrenched in power and custom, is able, if unjust, to withstand the pressure and the assault of an indignant public sentiment.

"Thrice is he armed who hath his quarrel just,
And he but naked, though locked up steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted."

And what will history say? History will record that this war was wantonly provoked by the late ruler of France, without the shadow of justification. Spain had seen fit to tender her troubled throne to a member of the House of Hohenzollern, and Bismarck, as Napoleon alleged had instigated the overture, without consultation given, or consent asked. This charge the Prussian government denied. But Napoleon was not pacified. But more than that, Leopold, in the interest of peace, declined the crown of Isabella. Here was satisfaction, concession, a surrender of the very thing in dispute. What more could be asked, in the name of reason? But still Napoleon was insatiate. He desired bonds of fate, such as equal sovereignty and national dignity could never, never grant. And hence came war, the flow of innocent blood, this waste of wealth and treasure, this Alps on Appenines of national debt, on the already burdened industry of the people. And so, we look at this war as causeless, wanton, and aggressive on the part of France, with a covetous eye upon the German provinces of the Rhine, and instigated to give new lustre to the military star obscured in Mexico, and fatally eclipsed by the superior lights of Sadowa.

And speaking of Mexico, why is it that the American people rejoice exceedingly over the triumph of German arms? Because, it is not in human nature to forget either kindnesses or injuries, benefits doubly valuable, when bestowed in the time of need—injuries unspeakably odious when heaped upon one in the hour of extremity. The American Government was lately menaced and assailed by the hand of treason. The planetary system of this Union of States was threatened with dissolution and chaos and anarchy seemed about to spread the pall of night over the best hopes of humanity. Who and where then in Europe were the fast and faithful friends of the American Union, of Constitutional liberty? Was it mother England? Was France our ally then, as when the Bourbon reigned? Who, I say, vindicated our cause, and saluted our flag with prayers? Who in Europe did this? Who sustained our drooping credit and sent to us by every ship the money to arm and feed our soldiers? Let the Alabama, that scourged and consumed our commerce on the high seas answer. Let Maximillian rise from his bloody grave and tell us. Let Carlot a answer, with her maniac cry? No, it was our kind German friends over the water. Here, they fought for us, like Alexander's, offering their honest breasts a living rampart to the foe. Abroad they wished us to succeed; they wished that slavery should die, and they took our obligations with a brother's trust, and with faith in God. It seemed, to all but German eyes, a hazardous investment, and the more hazardous, the more magnificent the generous spirit that dilated the pecuniary risk and sacrifice of our German friends. And now, my friends your turn has come, and happy are we to reciprocate the sympathies, which sustained and cheered us, in our great National struggle, and ordeal of fiery revolution. Was it not your great Minister, who, by cable message, congratulated Lincoln on the surrender of Lee? Was it not Count Bismarck's hand that sent a congratulatory note to General Grant upon his election to the Presidency? Was it not the same pen that signed or attested still more recently, that great treaty of international comity and justice which enjoins upon Prussia a recognition and respect of the laws of naturalization and citizenship of the United States Government, clothing the German adopted citizen with the full panoply of our protection? And last shall I mention that he hastened to assure our government, at the opening of the war, that he should admit us to all the privileges and immunities of the Treaty of Paris, to which we were not a party, and thus, in the interest of our commerce and humanity, gave us a proof of his good will and friendship.

I hear Count Bismarck charged with rapacity and unscrupulousness, but difficult are the steps of even honest ambition. But, he is but repeating our early American history, under somewhat different forms, and circumstances, but with scarcely less jealousies and difficulties than the founders of this republic once encountered. And no American citizen can fail to see the sagacity and grandeur of his ambition in his efforts to achieve a solid, symmetrical German unity, a unification of interests, silencing discord, and harmonizing jealousies, uniting under one Federal head, more States than now from the American galaxy, for the just purpose of a common interest and safety, a common progress and glory.

Bismarck may have "builded better than he knew," and insensibly, and without design, be laying the foundations of future Republics in Europe. For, gentlemen, let us forecast the series of effects that must follow from this surpassing triumph of Prussian arms and diplomacy, and German unity. First, the supremacy is ensured to Prussia all over Europe, from Constantinople to the pillars of Hercules; as Greek mariners anciently called the Straits of Gibraltar. The destinies of Europe are now in the hands of Count Bismarck. Already he has imposed silence and submission to his will. Do you not believe it? Then why does not the surly Russian bear arouse himself? And why has not humbled Austria seized this tempting chance to strike her enemy and avenge the burning stigma of Sadowa? Why has not Italy responded to the supplications of the devoted daughter of the Church, bowed before the altars of her holy religion? Why is Spain, Bourbon Spain, dumb with neutrality? Why is not the voice of England potent always heretofore, if not controlling, officious and absolute always, been heard even in the soft whisper of advise, or the coarser tones of protest? No, no, I tell you King William and his Fritz and Minister shall ride into Paris with no spur of ally aiding them. They shall enter conquerors, with no foreign hand upon their bridles.

But looking beyond this day, and we can see that the grand secret of Prussian successes will provoke the study of all governments. The grand system and methods of her social and political organizations will challenge inquiry and compel without delay imitation and adoption. And what is it, but an imitation of that eminent Greek type, a grand copy of the old sublime Hebrew polity? Every child must be educated, every male must bear arms, the whole country a school for instruction and a camp for drill. The old gymnasium of Greece revived in the Turner society, and Sangerfest of the Fatherland. The whole nation taught that while the citizen may think with Luther or the Pope, or with Spinoza, he must obey the State and be able in her cause to defend his life or willing to lose it.

Will this great, salutary, transcendant lesson be lost upon Europe? No, never! No, Gentlemen. It will be universally adopted. Wait God's good time. It will reorganize the whole social and political structure and system of the old world. Italy, fair Italy, will no longer bristle with banditti, nor swarm with lazzeroni, even in the priestly garb and office. Spain will shake off the sweat of sloth from her gold trimmed garments, as the lion of the desert the dews from his mane. France will be disenthralled and no longer be the sport and prey of demagogues or tyrants. Makes ignorance impossible and idleness a crime, let the training of the body and mind go hand in hand, emancipate thought, and the people will Republicanize themselves. They will establish equality. They will achieve liberty. The will abolish hereditary estates and titles. They will sweep away standing armies, the canker of peace, menacing the liberties of people like the janizaries of the Sultan. There may yet be seen, please God, five European governments, arising beyond the seas modeled after our own, allowing the widest scope to all the activities and possibilities of mankind, and ushering in the social and political millenium of the world. God speed the day!

SPEECH OF MORRIS EINSTEIN.

The ancients believed in supernatural wonders, in men having power over unearthly spirits; that genii or demoniac beings, could perform deeds impossible in a natural way or to human prowess. Who had not read or heard of the marvelous stories of the Arabian Nights? The hero of these stories—the favored Aladdin—had not only a number of genii subjected and obedient to his commands, but also a magic lamp by the help of which he performed whatever he pleased, realized his most extravagant wishes. But we all know that these are stories without foundation, mere products of fiction of an oriental phantasy, that only can amuse children; and no one in this enlightened nineteenth century can be found credulous, ignorant or foolish enough to believe them as real facts. And yet scarcely less marvelous deeds, scarcely less astounding wonders of real facts have we seen the new German Aladdin—the great enchanter, Bismarck—perform before the eyes of his amazed cotemporaries! Not two months have passed yet since that great tyrant of down-trodden France not only, but of all Europe, since that haughty Emperor Napoleon declared war on Prussia; just one short month had passed since actual hostilities commenced, and—does not that sound like an "Arabian Nights" story?—and already that overbearing Emperor is a humble prisoner to Prussia's King; already one half of his dreaded hosts has surrendered to our German heroes or been put hors de combat. Is the other half so securely enclosed and surrounded in that very fortress of Metz, that French treachery stole from the German Empire, more than two hundred year since, while peace reigned over the land—that its fate, too, is as surely sealed and inevitable as was that of their commander at Sedan, and victorious German braves are approaching the proud metropolis of that proudest of nations! But a little while yet, and the tell-tale wires of the telegraph will announce to the world the fall of Paris, will proclaim that long-suffering Germany has finally obtained peace and justice from her old tormentors, and the humi

LONDON, Sept. 8

Mr Drummond the banker, writes to the Post an account of Emperor Napoleon while a prisoner. He says Before long we joined the rear of the Emperor's train. The cortege was of great length. We had a good opportunity of seeing it as it passed over the bridge at right angles with the main road. First the Emperor's own carriage a traveling Berlin with this two or three other carriages some thing like the prison vans all marked 'Maison Militaire de l'Empereur,' and containing a number of the staff, numbers of horses followed some mounted by Imperial servants in liveries. The horses were magnificent animals, over sixteen hands high. The postillions wore glazed hats, grey coats and scarlet vests. There were relays of horses for the carriages and saddles and horses beyond number. At noon the Emperor alighted in Bouillon and walked to the hotel. The crowd of people was enormous but were kept at bay by the Belgium troops. French officers of high grade among them Prince Murat. The Emperor appeared at a window and the crowd hurrahed. The French prisoners were silent. It was impossible to find quarters and food at the hotel. The Emperor dined first then his suite and the rest at what they could get. About 2 o'clock the Emperor accompanied by Gen Castelman, came to the door of the railway station. He seemed well his face showing no emotion though he leaned heavily on the arm of the servant who led him out. He wore a red kepi embroidered with gold. Dispatches were handed him which he read outside on the platform and wrote a reply. He afterward paced up and down the platform smoking a cigar and returned to the waiting room and read the Independence Belge until the train arrived when he departed.

It is reported the Duke of Persigny is preparing the defence of Havre for the defence of an empire of Imperial Prince.

Continental money markets are extremely unsettled.

Rumored Alliance with Russia.

A special to the Tribune from London Sept 8 says The following report of the circular by the French Minister of Foreign Affairs to a private correspondent whose position enables him to show it is and who guarantees the accuracy of the statement Jules Favre has been appointed to form a official announcement of the Republic in a demonstration at Madrid with an intimation to the Prince that he could be President of the Spanish Republic. Favre replied that the Government of France will not this moment make any announcement to encourage a Republican movement would even prefer that it should not be declared. The Russian Minister obtained a refusal to a Republicanism so spreading would alarm and terrify Russia and imperil negotiations pending between the provisional government and Russia for an alliance offensive and defensive against Prussia should the latter prove too exacting in terms of peace. In other words if the alliance takes place it is on the point that the Russian marches straight upon Berlin. She has already begun to concentrate troops to her western frontiers. It is said that can tempt Russia. It is said that the same minister night which Prussia has now dictated against France will sooner or later be turned against Russia with a view to regaining all the German provinces of Russia.

Mr de Fonrodon added You may make use of this intelligence, for I cannot remain secret. I have to depended upon absolutely.

Advices from Paris say that the province of Barcelona has been placed in quarters. Gen Acton having been summoned to Madrid increased attention on the ground. No one placed himself at the head of the Communes.

PRAL PORT Sept 8

Amongst the latest advices are the following published.

French Demonstrations

PARIS Sept 8

Rue Gaetons dot 03 frales.

Great crowds of the Guard Mobile and citizens carrying French and American flags in the demonstration before the American legation to day in gratitude to the encouraging of the French Republic by the United States. The letter of Mr Washburn in favor of France gives great satisfaction. The people seem persuaded that the American government will interfere in favor of peace.

The enemy is in danger. In the presence of the enemy all difference of opinion and all opposition should disappear before the general safety. Accordingly let that certain never mind or judge in such a supreme moment. The undersigned sets aside all opinion save one that of our duty to offer our most energetic and absolute assistance and asks in condition we that the Republic be maintained. Let us all be buried in the ruins of Paris rather and have a record to the dishonorment of of France. Signed by Banque Lacambre the Tredor Brothers Villeneuve Flaard Laurand Pelisa and others.

Paris Strangely Calm.

A special to the Herald from London says a letter from Paris September midnight says tranquility continues strangely calm but underneath is easily down a serious feeling of apprehension. There is beyond doubt much concealed desire for peace on any terms in preference to subjecting the capital to the horrors and danger of siege but every body is afraid to talk of yielding. The circular of Favre is well liked. I impressed with courage the doubting and undecided. The sombre weather increased the depression.

The Uhlans are approaching fast. What effect their actual arrival will produce is hard to say but it is likely to be defence although if the question is honestly decided according to the wishes of the people it would be submission. The great trouble is want of organization. The mongrel bodies of troops have a security or officer. A notice to expel women and children from the city is expected to morrow. The exodus of strangers in every direction is increasing hourly. Hotels are empty and the theatres are all closed.

Emile Blanc will be sent as minister to England. Victor Hugo to Brussels and Pelletan to Washington.

PARIS Sept 8

The following official advices are made public.

A dispatch from the Prefect of Aube to Minister Gambetta dated Lion Sept says a flag of truce preceding three corps d'armee from Pethel Clairaue Portion and Rheims has just been conducted to the General commanding. Summary in the name of the King of Prussia who left Rheims this morning. The advanced guard of one corp should now be in the neighborhood of Sedan. The main army party will pass Rheims this day. The belong to this corps.

The Minister of the Interior has sent the following circular to the Prefects of Departments. The enemy is advancing on Paris in three corps d'armee one of which has arrived at Sceveson in the Department of Aisne. The advance guard of the corps has summoned Laon to surrender which shuts its gates and resists.

PARIS Sept 8

Minister Washburn in an unofficial interview with Jules Favre on Monday stated he had been one of all Germans confined in prisons. All government officials and a hundred left the city yesterday and to day with passports of the American Minister.

No gas will be used in the city in case of siege as the gas works are all outside the fortifications.

Arrangements have been made to place electric lights at various point. Shops will use lamps and candles and the appearance of Paris without gas and the theatres and all places of amusement abandoned will impress one forcibly with the terrible change that has come over the nation.

Rumors abound at every corner. One declares that Washburne has gone as envoy to the Prussian King, another that Prussia offers peace upon the payment of five thousand million francs, which has been guaranteed by Rothschild.

Jewelry has entirely disappeared from the Rue De La Paix, and the dimly lighted street is stripped of its glittering gems, and presents a melancholy look.

Communication Interrupted.

The interruption of telegraphic communication with Epreany Chitane and Thierry, indicates the presence of the enemy at those points. Communication continues with Meziers Ephlan and Moulhouse.

There is no news from Bazaine.

Not Confirmed.

Esquares has arrived at Marseilles where he was received with enthusiasm by the citizens. The work of revision is actively going on in all departments.

The Garde Mobile everywhere asked to be led to Paris. Many battalions are now here or on the march hither.

[Signed] GAMBETTA

Capitulation Imminent.

LONDON Sept 8

News from the vicinity of Metz announced capitulation is imminent. A traveler among the Prussians from Luxembourg says The surrender has already been expected.

The Prussians journals say the Emperor so exposed himself in the battle before Sedan as to leave no doubt of his intention to seek death.

The North German Gazette says of Jules Favre's manifesto that it begins with phrases and ends with lies.

The Prussian Venetzer announced the death of the Prince where dangers to shipping from blockades is demanded. It remarks that the Accole and Marseilles which have been received publish articles calculated to disturb order.

Henri Rochefort has addressed letters to editors in which he says When all opinions are set aside when citizens armed against the enemy, an attack entitled "recent" and signed Cassagnac which actually incites war appeared in the Ulrne lesse, permit to be known to the public I am foreign to the intended that journal.

Applicants for Office.

The new Ministry are beset with applicants for office notwithstanding the condition of the country. The Ministry appear more anxious to turn out Imperialists and provide places for Republicans than to stand against the approaching enemy. Patriotic people think wildly one proposes to place Mac Mahon at the head of the army another to let the Prussians in the city and kill them in the streets. Underneath all this is the fear of an outbreak of thieves and general plunder and slaughter. This fear is really as great as that of the advancing Prussians.

The stories circulated by an English paper of the interview between Napoleon and King William are mere romance. It is said that King William has ordered Rothschild's chateau near Paris ready for the reception of the royal head quarters on Sunday night.

The value of the French crown jewels in 1791 was estimated at 20 000 000 francs and the celebrated Regent diamond at 12 000 000. Their present value is triple these amounts.

There is a rumor that the jewels have been sent from the bank of France via Dieppe to London to take care of the Rothschilds.

The report that the Prussians would not arrive for eight or ten days is fallacious and with good roads and uninterrupted passage they will doubtless be here by the middle of next week. The approach will probably be made from Vincennes and Denise.

In Favor of Peace.

A cable special to the New York Times from Paris says The general feeling is in favor of peace. The journals speak openly of the Prussians as unreasonable in their demands. It is believed President Grant has offered mediation but it was respectfully declined at Lyons some hours in advance of the declaration at Paris.

Prussians in full uniform were seen in the Square of Odion last night. The Prussian are marching with two or three days march of Paris.

A correspondent at Madrid writes that the Committee of the Republican Club Gen Prim and demanded the Spanish Government with France and declare a Republic. Prim refused and is thinking of a move against the Republican movement. He has in Madrid 60 pieces of artillery and 24 000 men.

A Tribune correspondent writing from Paris on Wednesday night says The city is perfectly tranquil but ugly elements are at work. The government is not liberal enough for all. The Imperial embassy doors have been removed and new ones appointed. Preparations for defence continue and the efforts made are extraordinary. Prices have been offered for novel means of destroying the invading force.

The Surtax Commission meets to-day to devise some means of assisting the defence. Fugitives from Sedan are continually arriving worn, travel rugged and rejected by everyone. They declare they have been betrayed and that Mac Mahon movement from Chalons was by the Emperors orders who never relinquished the command. The stores of bread and ammunition are confirmed and the return of troops openly display cartridges which are partly made of sand.

Louis Blanc declared on leaving Brighton that he was going to Paris to shoulder a musket, and would accept no office whatever.

The Baltic Fleet.

A correspondent of the Tribune says A French officer with the Baltic fleet writes from Copenhagen March 3 Sept 3d that the quadron is doing nothing but block in the coast and the task is one encountering numberless difficulties. The quadron never anchors and is subject to continued surprise in the night from Prussian gunboats which coming out of the harbors knowingly to themselves appear among the French vessels either to reconnoitre or blow them up with torpedoes as has nearly happened in the roadstead of Dantzew, where Admiral Bouet anchored under the heavy guns of the forts. The Prussian vessels, being small and swift risked but little and success might have destroyed the French. The squadron can only cool on the open sea and with great danger, the wants is of suitable vessels for blockading purposes. Iron clads are too slow and of too great a draught and cruising is most difficult and perilous. Admiral Bouet has separated the squadron into two divisions. The Division blockades the shore on the Russian frontiers to Rugen the second, under Admiral Dandorne watches the coast from Rugen to North Schleswig. No important encounter had taken place with the Prussian fleet. Two vessels the Ocean and the Flander are about to return to France.

The news of McMahon's and the Emperors surrender is just received. The intelligence is but little grief for the members of the fleet are not Bonapartists. After such events the squadron must remain inactive but if the new government resolves to continue the struggle we will wage war on the German coast politely.

King William at Rheims.

A cable special to the Herald from Leon France says At nine o'clock this morning the headquarters of the King of Prussia remained at Rheims. The army commenced a steady march on Paris on Tuesday. The advance will take place along the roads leading to the capital from Compagne Lawsons and Epernay. The advance cavalry was yesterday at Compaigne and at Cressy, between Lassons and Paris and at many points on the Paris and Strasbourg railroad. The armies moved with surprising regularity and a simultaneous arrival in the environs of Paris is expected. A massed attack will be made upon the St. Denis quarter unless a declaration of peace should prevent the assault upon the city. The German troops are in excellent and healthy condition.

Dispatches received by King William from Mezieres yesterday state that the health of the troops is good and all is quiet.

There is reason to believe arrangements for the capitulation of Bazaine may will speedily made.

New Minister to Washington

PARIS Sept 8

It is now stated that Ladru Rollin is to be appointed French Minister to Washington.

The Journal de Paris says We are on the eve of another revolution.

Princess Joinville D'Aumale and Chartier were in Paris They called on Minister Favre and asked to share in the defense of Paris. Favre told them that their presence might be misunderstood and appealing to their patriotism requested them to leave the city, which the Princess concluded to do and they have since fulfilled their promise.

The Journal de Paris says America has merited well of the civilized world for addressing France in her hour of peril and misfortune words of consolation and I hope that by recognizing the French Republic America opens the way of peace.

It must be that the people of this continent will follow her example.

The Evening National says we are led to admire the United States which has always had a right to our respect because she enforced her rights and conquered her independence. That country is for us a living lesson and constant instruction. This may explain how highly we esteem its recognition and good wishes.

The journals say the Prussians defer the attack on Paris in hopes of civil war. Others fear they may mean to attack other places less prepared for defence. A noticeable change has been made in the Department of Telegraph. The new Director Gen Scheurcher is most liberal and liberal and is endeavoring to change the spirit of opposition to all innovations merely because they are such. A remarkable improvement has been made in the working of other Government Departments.

Popularity of Trochu.

The popularity of Trochu is unbounded. The people all day long await his entrance to the Louvre to cheer him. The aspect of Paris is that of a military camp. The Garde Mobile and Garde Nationale dwell in the streets. On all sides men in uniform are to be seen. Regiments of cavalry and artillery passing through the streets. Mobiles from the provinces are billeted upon the inhabitants. At the railway stations touching harrowing scenes women and children endeavoring to leave in thousands upon thousands. Baggage is piled as high as the houses and many of the railroad officers refuse to take baggage. As the trains leave upon each departure hundreds are left behind. Women fainting weep and children are frightened. At the depots there is no police, but a guard of citizens who strictly investigate everybody. No places of amusement are open. Most of the theatres belong to the National Guard which it might have possession of the boulevards. The town is quiet as a provisional place, which is a most impressive change.

The determination to defend the city is general and unyielding. It has been promoted since 12 o'clock that the Diplomatique Corps was conferring and propose in case of agreement, to all go to night to the King of Prussia. All the Embassadors the papal nuncio included have called upon the Minister of Foreign Affairs and it is understood will all go with the Government. The delegates will reside in Tours during the siege.

The Postoffice department and those of telegraph and finances are already installed largely at Tours. Should that department be invaded the service will be removed further south.

There is no truth in the rumor of a new loan. Many journals the stamp duty being removed are unchanged in price owing to the alleged high price of paper.

Contradicted.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8

The statement published to the effect that the President had instructed Secretary Fish to issue the proclamation recognizing the Republic of France is without foundation. This is not the case. Such act on would be unnecessary and irregular. The French Minister has received a dispatch from Jules Favre announcing the establishment of a Republic in France, and requesting Berthamy to present the fact to the United States Government. Instructions have been sent to our Minister at Paris to recognize the new Government when it has been definitely ascertained that the Republic exists. Intelligence has been received here of the acceptance by nearly all the towns and cities of France of the new state of affairs, and it is now quite certain that within a week the Republic of France will be established with almost the unanimous consent of the French people.

It is ascertained that the present French Embassy will shortly be replaced but as yet no appointments have been made. Great regret is expressed here at the fact if it be such that England should have been allowed to recognize the new Government of France before the United States. A wonderful change in sentiment has taken place and many of those who were opposed to Napoleon now strongly sympathise with France.

—An adjourned meeting of the School Board will be held this (Friday) evening, at the usual hour, when it is hoped all members will be present.

—The Citizens' Bank will be opened and ready for business on Monday, the 19th inst, instead of Monday next, as stated in the HERALD a few days since —The "oldest inhabitant," who was in our sanctum a short time since and predicted an early fall, was evidently a true prophet, judging from the indications of the past three days.

—Sportsmen report an abundance of squirrels in the woods a few miles west of the city. We yesterday saw twenty-two brought in by a gentleman as the result of six hours' gunning.

—The various papers of Erie are persistently endeavoring to awaken the inhabitants of that sleepy old city to the importance of the extension of the Union and Titusville railroad, though their laudable efforts so far have not met with much encouragement.

—The Erie Republican, one of our most valued exchanges, came to hand yesterday enlarged from a six to a seven column paper, the increase in size giving about seven additional columns of space. The Republican is a wide-awake journal, conducted with energy and ability, and is evidently a thorn in the side of some of its elder rivals.

—At a meeting of the Fire Department held last evening at the Col. Drake engine house, for the purpose of filling the positions of First and Second Assistant Engineers, the following gentlemen were chosen: First Assistant, James Reardon: Second Assistant, Joseph Vilky. Both these new officers have taken much interest in the affairs of the Department, and their choice gives general satisfaction.

RATHER ROUGH.—On Wednesday evening, a well-known city father—"nameless here for evermore"—animated by a laudable desire to extend his sympathy to our German citizens and obtain a free ride in one of the carriages provided for the magnates, wended his way in due season to the place where the procession was organizing. On reaching the spot, he at once took his seat in a fine open barouche, which fell promptly into line, and moved off to the strains of martial music, the very steeds prancing as though conscious that the occupant of the carriage was the cynosure of all eyes. Along the route the "father" bore himself with becoming modesty, meditated upon the rapid growth of Titusville, the general illuminations, the large number of Germans plodding along on foot, and their proper appreciation of greatness in providing each member of the council with a chariot and charioteer.

Arriving in front of Corinthian Hall, he alighted with due dignity, and was moving away in good order when he was brought to a sudden "right about" by a hail from the commander-in-chief of the aforementioned steeds, who rudely shouted, "hello, Mr., come down, here; I want six shillings for this ride.' Calmly turning to the ignorant youth, our friend, the Councilman, with a wave of the hand, proudly remarked, "boy, I'm a member of the City Council, an invited guest, and don't have to pay anything." "City Council be ——blessed," said the irreverent descendant of Jehu, "you can't come that over me; there's their carriages away ahead there; this here's my rig that you've been pattin' on style in, and I want them six shillin's quick." Taking in the situation, the crestfallen councilman drew his "weasel-skin," and departed, musing on the mutability of local greatness. He didn't appear to enjoy himself much afterwards, and it is reported that yesterday his sympathies were all transfered to the French.

Neighborhood News.

—The Warren and Erie Judical muddle is still unsettled.

—New Castle has a population of only 7,000. The people had confidently counted on 10,000.

—From the figures of the Advertiser it would seem that the population of Elmira will fall below 16,000.

—The Spectator reports oil developments as being prosecuted rapidly and successfully, in the vicinity of Franklin.

—A boot-black has arrived in Kittanning, and the delighted inhabitants think the next thing will be a city charter.

—From January 1st to September 1st, there was rafted out of the Susquehanna boom 763,890 logs, or 156,638,008 feet board measure.

—The Tioga and Potter county Republican conventions do not meet until the middle of September, which makes a very short Congressional Campaign.

—The Sunday School Association of Erie closed its session at Girard, on the 7th inst. The many schools of the county are reported as in a most flourishing condition.

—Fifteen years ago Mr. James F. Sherry, now the popular manager of Sherry's New York Theatre, was employed as a spinner in Jamison's cotton factory at Norristown.

—The people of Franklin, without regard to church lines, earnestly hope the coming Erie Conference of the M. E Church will return Rev. John Peate to that station.

—Harrisburg has an empty treasury, is unable to pay its gas bill for street lamps, and the gas is cut off, involving the city in darkness nightly. The people are much exercised about the matter.

—Mr Jeremiah Fox, of Cambridge, was struck by the Express train on the A. & G. W. Railway, about two miles below Venango Station, on Saturday last, and so badly injured as to cause his death three hours after. It is supposed he was intoxicated at the time, as he had been to Meadville to get his pension, having been a wounded soldier.—Con. Record.

POLICE MATTERS.—During the past few days the positions of our policemen have been sinecures, so exceedingly orderly has been this usually well behaved city. On Thursday morning, about 3 o'clock, however, the officers arrested a couple of men who hailed from Enterprise, and gave their names as T. M. Allison and G. H. Hays. When interrogated, they were unable to give any satisfactory reason for meandering about at that unseemly time of night, and for fear some accident should befall them or lest they might wander among thieves, they were kindly provided with quarters in the lock-up. A hearing was had before Mayor Bates in the morning, when, as no definite charge could be made, they were discharged with the admonition to retire at a more christian hour when visiting Titusville hereafter.

Justice Strouse's receptions have been so poorly attended recently, that he begins to feel utterly discouraged, only two cases being brought before him yesterday, hardly enough to keep strong his faith in the good time said to be always coming.

Henry Hays, arrested by Officers Rouse and Miller, was arraigned on a charge of drunk and disorderly conduct, and as the offense was clearly proven, he was fined $10 and costs

A SUBSCRIPTION paper is being circulated in our city to raise money for the relief of the widows and orphans of the German nation, bereft by the war. The list is already quite large, and the subscriptions very liberal. It is a popular and patriotic charity, and every one seems to be desirous to evince a practical sympathy with the cause in this kind and substantial manner, so honorable to the best feelings of human nature.

MRS. CORA L. V. HATCH will deliver a lecture next Wednesday evening, September 14th, at Good Templar Hall, Shamburg. Subject: "The prospects and dangers of Europe and America." This is the opening lecture of the literary course for the winter, at Shamburg, and her citizens should give it every encouragement and support. Let the house be well filled to hear this talented speaker.

BASE BALL.—Quite an interesting game of base ball was played at the Tarr farm, yesterday, between the "Black Feet" of Petroleum Centre, and the "Dirty Stockings," of the former place. The result was a victory for the latter by a score of 33 to 16. The game was an exciting one, and a large number of spectators were in attendance.

OVERSIGHT.—In our account of the German celebration, through some unaccountable oversight, we omitted to mention the presence of delegations from Shamburg and Pleasantville. Both these places were well represented, and the Germans of this city desire to return their thanks for the attendance.

A box containing a black bear was received at an express office in San Francisco the other day, with this inscription: "Black Bar! Ef yew don't want to get bit, kepe yer fingers outen the crax!"

Canada Oil Letter.

PETROLIA, Sept. 5, 1870.

Editors Morning Herald:

The market for crude has been slightly in favor of the producer this week. Now it is held firmer with an upward tendency: a sale of 1,000 bbls was effected on Saturday at $1 50, f. o. b. here.

The production during the last eight days has exceeded 1,000 bbls per day. The shipments have been larger, being some 23 cars per day. This is owing to the opening of the fall trade

The export firms are still busy, and should the prices continue firm in New York, I think there is no doubt but that they will still continue to refine.

The Perkins well (reported in my last) close to the north end of the M'Millan lot, on being tested proved not up to the mark and is being drilled deeper. Mr. Harry Prince has a splendid show in his new well on the same lot; it is some 300 feet and he is still drilling. The Cole well has a new pump and is doing considerably more than at last report, her average being fully 150 bbls per day. The Craise well holds up to her 300 bbls; both these wells pump nearly pure oil and scarcely any water. The quality is not the best, being only thirty-one and a half gravity—31½. Most of the territory immediately adjoining these wells is taken up. There are four wells going down on the north end of the lot.

Oil matters generally are very lively. Crude at $1 40 to $1 50 f. o. b. here. Refined at 25c. M. P.

Some Mention of Vines and Climbers.

There is no ornamentation for cottage or palace like the drapery of vines; nothing that so gracefully adorns, and nothing so craftily hides defects. Many people are compelled to live in houses built after the ignorant or economic taste of somebody else; houses in which every angle has an ugly expression, or worse still, an eternal newness that will not be softened, even when the paint is faded or entirely gone. There is no remedy for a misplaced window, for the outside has doubtless been made to accommodate some deformity of the internal structure. Unnatural depressions or projections must remain, an exposition, perhaps, of the phrenological peculiarities of the builder. But nature has a politic resource in reserve for such cases. She has a real woman's tact in making common or outrageous things "splendid." She takes delight in bestowing charity on bare angles and dwarfed proportions; in throwing the tendrils of a vine in wide eccentric leaps over a broken wall; or in covering some villainous gap with a mask of green. Perhaps a tree refuses to grow in any other away except longitudinally, after its branches have been successively rubbed off by cows, or torn by the wind; a vine running up the trunk makes it leafy and beautiful. Or a favorite old tree refuses to-die entirely, but lingers in leafless imbecility; a rapid growing rose will climb quickly to the summit, and flaunt out red signals on every breeze. About the entire premises, old buildings, necessary but not ornamental, can be changed entirely in appearance; or new ones may be modified from staring discomfort into homelike and inviting beauty, by a judicious disposal of vines.

There are so many varieties of creepers and climbers that they constitute a race in themselves. While some are tractable in disposition, and twine and grow in whatever form they are trained, others are not. A favorite woody creeper is the Trumpet vine, sturdy, and flourishing great orange-red trumpets over any defeated or prostrate wall it may happen to near. There is also a wild vine which every student of the woods will recognize. It should have been a tree, but since it is not, it revenges itself by taking the size of its own body out of some tree. It binds itself in a perfect net-work of brown threads, close to the trunk, and if torn away shows its bodily impress deep in the bark. It can be transplanted, but does not easily reconcile itself to having its web broken.

The Woodbine that decorates the front wall of St. James Memorial Church on Franklin street is suited to hardy life and grows very rapidly. It is a dark glossy green, and has an independent way of spreading its tendrils boldly in either direction, clinging closely to the abraded surface of the wall, climbing thriftily to the highest point and wreathing about the cross.

Of climbing roses, the Prairie is most hardy and beautiful. It will festoon a single pillar or an entire porch, but lacks a rose's most essential beauty and fragrance. Sweet Briars trained over a trellis or a window, have their peculiar merits; the fragrance of the leaves, the delicate, pink flush of the fragile flowers, and the red hipes that stay on through the winter. After a rain, or in early morning, they will flood the whole house with odor. The common Boursalt rose is one that requires little care. The blossoms are abundant and rich in June, and the foliage forms a heavy canopy of green. Downing, who had a real Persian passion for roses, gives a few directions for cultivation which are worth remembering. He says the best specific stimulus for rose is roasted turf, which is made by paring sods from commons or the roadside, and half charring them. It acts like magic in causing the plant to throw out new buds, and leaves, and richly colored flowers.

The Honeysuckle would perhaps be pronounced the sweetest of climbers, leaving bees as judges. It has the merit of continuous flowering. The two varieties look well growing together, one with blossoms coral red, the other straw-colored with fringed edges. They are a refuge, however, for an ugly worm—an inch long nonentity, but in habit a very vampyre. It is so like the stem of the vine itself that only careful searching can distinguish it. It lies at length, following angles and curves, and in a slow way exhausts the life of the plant.

Clematis is a favorite climber, with white, snow-flake flowers sprinkled over the green in midsummer, and with ghosts of flowers clinging to it in winter, in the shape of hairy, unpalpable husks.

The Madeira vine apes the luxuriance of the tropics, in rich succulent leaves, and flowers of overwhelming odor. It is slow in beginning, but when the delight of growing is made manifest, performs that duty with alacrity and grace.

Of nondescript creepers, or rather of the summer-lived members of the family, the Morning Glory has the preference of old fashioned people. The flowers look out in the morning, and after finding the world is a wicked place, droop and die. A vine similar to it—country cousin perhaps—would be immediately christened the bore, by Holmes, who has such a fastidious abhorrence of pertinacity of character. It has for a foundation little potato-like tubers, which add, and multiply, and live, in spite of extermination and scalding and uprooting. The leaves are halberd-shape, and the stems have a bewitched crinkle towards the extremities. One tendril of it wound round a bouquet will give it a look like the crazy Ophelia with her wreath of willow. It is by no means ugly or repulsive, but woe to him who plants it. Little shrinking pansies flee from it in dismay, and are out of the trellis-bed, into the grass, before they know it; even the hardy ivy dreads an encounter with it. It would not be amiss if all the collected bulbs could be thrown out into some waste, unprofitable place, and be let to have their disideratum of light and air. Cypress has a mournful name, for anything willing to live and ready to be gay. The leaves are exquisitely fine, and long scarlet trumpets hang all over the misty green

In a small door-yard where there are no trees, a rustic device of planting a tree that has been cut down, and partly deprived of its limbs, is a good one. A climbing rose, or ivy planted at the foot of this, soon creates a living tree, and one of rare shape for the species of blossoms which it bears. Winding close to the trunk it shows little luxuriance, but when once at the top the growth goes on, and long trailing tufts of leaves, and blossoms, too it it be a rose, will fall over to sway about in the wind.

Another device of a Belgian horticulturist is a moveable trellis, which will help to give variety to the limited scope of a city garden. It is simply a strong, wooden box, about three feet square, with a double trellis, which may be eight or ten feet high In the box may be planted any exotic climbers, or even two varieties, roses or passion flowers This can be transported to any part of the yard, turned at different angles, or even brought into the house.

Still another way to grow vines is in hanging baskets. Any trailing plant can be reared in this way, and hung out of windows, under porches, or from the limbs of trees. Very pretty designs in wire are made, but rustic inventions of all kinds are more unique. Make, for instance, a log-cabin of sticks an inch in diameter. You can make it studiously dilapidated, with any one you remember to have seen in the country for a model. Line it with moss, the same as a wire basket, and sprinkle it freely with Lobelia seed, and set it up in the fork of a tree There it will rain down a spray of blue flowers the summer through. Some of these baskets can be made miniature gardens by frequent changes of plants, and by having various kinds growing in them at once

ANOTHER BIG WELL.—Messrs. Arnold, Phinney & Derousse, the well known oil operators, are, we are pleased to record, again in luck. Their well No. 2, J. S. McCray farm, was completed yesterday, and commenced testing last night, striking oil shortly after pumping began, and she is now yielding between 230 and 240 barrels per day, with prospects of increasing. The well has about 32 feet of third sand rock, and has a strong volume of gas. It will doubtless prove one of the best wells on the hill.

Their well No. 1, same farm, has been yielding for thirty days up to last night, and has averaged daily, by actually measurement, 320 barreles. Decidedly a good thing to have in the family.

STILL ANOTHER BIG WELL.—Cady & Thompson well No 2, James S. McCray farm, was completed at daylight this morning, tubed this forenoon, and commenced testing about noon. She is now yielding a good 250 barrels per day and increasing In all respects it acts similar to the other big wells on the farm, starting up at about fifty barrels per day and increasing to 250 in a short time. This well also has about 42 feet of third sand-rock, and a very strong volume of gas. It will be remembered that an explosion of gas occurred at this well a day or two since which destroyed the derrick and severely burned two of the workmen. When lighted up the gas from this well presents a beautiful appearance especially in the evening. It is on of the best wells in the region.—Pet. Centre Record.

The Shivering Season.—The loss to the laboring classes of the United States caused by fever and ague, has been estimated at upwards of two millions of dollars per annum. Whole settlements are sometimes prostrated by the disease, and it is regarded in some localities as one of those visitations of providence which cannot be avoided. This is a mistake. As certainly as any of the evils which are invited by neglect may be forestalled by precaution—so certainly may an attack of intermittent (or remittent) fever be prevented by invigorating the system with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, in advance of the season, at which this malady prevails. Prevention, it is needless to say, is the wisest policy; but it is consoling to know that where time has not been thus taken by the forelock, and the paroxysms have actually commenced, a complete cure may, in all cases, be rapidly effected by the use of this powerful vegetable tonic. The reputation of the Bitters as a specific for dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation and nervous debility, has in some measure thrown into the shade its merits as a preventive and cure of other ailments, but all who have ever taken it, either as a protection against or a remedy for malarious fevers, will admit that it surpasses in efficiency all the so-called specifics (including quinine), usually prescribed for these maladies, while it is at the same time entirely harmless and decidedly palatable.

The Titusville Weekly Herald is printed on a sheet 27 by 42 inches, contains 36 columns—only four of which are devoted to advertisements, and gives twice as much reading matter as any other paper printed in the country. Subscription, to any office in the United States $2.00 per year. Canada subscribers twenty cents extra for postage. Call and get specimen copy.

Infringement Notice.—The subscriber has learned that a certain firm in Titusville, known as "Bryan, Dillingham & Co.," have commenced the manufacture of SOCKET RODS with SOCKET JOINTS. This is a DIRECT INFRINGEMENT ON HIS RIGHTS, as his claim is "connecting two sections of rod by means of wedges, wedging sockets, and double coupling bolt." He does not specify any particular shaped wedge, nor of what material it shall be made. All rods made as above described outside of his manufactory, are direct infringements.

This, therefore is to caution Oil Operators, and all others, against buying or using any rods so made, except those of his manufacture, as by so doing they will lay themselves liable, and will be dealt with according to law. WM. J. INNIS.

hours, aye, for days, without meeting with anything but ruins. Now how shows history the French King of that period, the falsely so-called Ludwig the Great (Louis the XIV) and his Cardinal Minister without conscience—the scheming Richelieu? They sided with the Cathocics, now with Protestants in Germany in order to distract both, to prolong the war, the better to gain their unholy ends; while in France herself they prosecuted bigotedly their own Protestant subjects, murdered and drove out the Hugenots. It was by such diabolical means that they wrested the valuable province of Alsace at the "Peace of Westphalia (1648), that now German valor and the heroes of "Our Fritz," tore from their rapacious grasp. And so it was all along. Napolean conquered Germany; but he did it by first dividing it, and then conquering Germany with the help of German Princes and armies.

But, my friends and fellow citizens, such was the policy of monarchical France merely; and as the last papers brought us the gladdening news that the French people declared the Republic,—let us forget the past! Monarchical or imperial France, I would have said, King William and his victorious Germans shall treat without mercy, and exact Alsace, Lorraine and large indemnification and guarantees for future peace. But with Republican France I sympathize. If France will be a true and honest Republic, if she will extend to us the Republican brother hand, then let us grasp it with fervor; don't let us creak nor humble her, but let us be forgiving and brotherly. I would almost be willing to allow her to stipulate her own conditions. If she will proclaim and practice Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity, then I say in full sympathy with her, Hail Republican France!

A "smart" girl in Benton county, Indiana, a few days ago popped the question to her bashful lover, asked his parents' consent, got a marriage license, spoke to the parson, and had the knot tied. What is to become of us?

The steam power employed in this country is equal to one hundred and thirty millions of men, but that of Great Britain is vastly greater, being equal to four hundred millions of men.

Dr. Nehemiah Adams, a Congregational minister of Boston, preached in the Episcopal church at Hong Kong, China, by special request, for Arch-deacon Gray, of the Church of England.

DEAR SIR:—The Blake Pump works admirably and is now supplying my large boiler (with which I pump five wells) at a speed of only thirty-seven strokes per minute.
I shall soon connect it with a still larger boiler, and have no doubt it will supply them both easily. The Pump has never required the least repair, is always ready to start without help and is, without exception, the best Steam Pump I have ever seen.
